FORT LAUDERDALE, Florida – April 1, 2016 – ScribeAustralia Healthcare, a division of ScribeAmerica, hosted presentations at two key healthcare conferences in late March where they discussed the benefits of medical scribes to top healthcare executives and medical practitioners.

In response to demand for new solutions to an increasingly complex healthcare environment, ScribeAustralia attended the Australian Private Hospitals Association's 35th National Congress in Gold Coast and Criterion Conferences' "Driving Quality in Emergency Departments" event in Sydney. Over the course of these two events, ScribeAustralia representatives met with over 25 hospital and health system leaders.

Hosted by ScribeAmerica's CEO, Dr. Michael Murphy, and Director of Clinical Affairs, Dr. Jacquie Irvine, the presentations introduced the concept of medical scribes and discussed how scribes can help meet the increased demands facing doctors.

"We understand the increased pressures weighing on providers, whether it's the amount of documentation, electronic documentation systems or additional ancillary duties," said

ScribeAmerica's founder and CEO, Dr. Michael Murphy. "Scribes help doctors get back to the bedside, drive productivity and ultimately help improve patient care."
